Thanks to the generosity of UT community members, 87 families, including more than 200 children, will have a brighter holiday this year. The Office of Student Involvement organized the University's participation in the adopt-a-family and holiday giving programs.

Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist to speak at UT commencement Dec. 17

By Kim Goodin

Toledo native and Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist Michael D. Sallah will return to his alma mater Sunday, Dec. 17, to deliver the keynote address during The University of Toledo's fall commencement ceremony.

The event will begin at 10 a.m. in Savage Arena.

Sallah will address 2,067 candidates for degrees, including 118 doctoral, 523 master's, 1,370 bachelor's and 56 associate's.

The ceremony is open to the public and can be viewed live at video.utoledo.edu.

Sallah's investigative work as a reporter and editor with award-winning newspapers across the country has revealed public corruption, police abuses and government blunders, resulting in grand jury investigations, legislative reform, and the recovery of millions of taxpayer dollars.

He is a reporter on the national investigations team at USA Today/Gannett Network in Washington, D.C.

Sallah

"This is where it all began for me," Sallah said. "From the time I took my first journalism class in the fall of my freshman year, I fell in love with journalism, and UT is a big part of that. It's part of my foundation — the professors, the values they conveyed to me about journalism, and why it's so critical to our society, especially investigative work. I'm honored to be coming home to be the commencement speaker."

"Journalists have an important role to inform the public about the issues that affect our lives, and Michael Sallah has embraced

Fewer toys lead to richer play experiences, UT researchers find

By Cherie Spino

Any parent knows how toys seem to magically multiply and take over a house. Do children need so many toys?

A team of University of Toledo researchers studied whether the number of toys in a toddler's environment influenced their quality of play. Their findings: Less is definitely more when it comes to creative, healthy play.

The results of the study come just in time for family and friends who are picking up holiday gifts for the children in their lives. The research, which will appear in the February issue of Infant Behavior and Development, suggests that an abundance of toys may create a distraction. Fewer new toys might be a better route this holiday season.

When toddlers had exposure to fewer toys, they played twice as long with the toys they had and in more sophisticated ways, said Dr. Alexia Metz, the study's lead investigator and a UT associate professor of occupational therapy.

As the mother of 12-year-old twins, Metz has personal experience with the proliferation of toys phenomenon.

"I was astonished by how much our home filled up with stuff," she said. "I wondered whether there was any risk to having that much stuff."

Metz said she also had observed people worrying whether their toddlers had attention deficit disorder. Toddlers, by nature, are distractible, but she wondered whether their environment might be a factor in how they played or how easily distracted they were.

Metz and her team of graduate students studied 36 toddlers from 18 to 30 months of age. The children visited the playroom lab twice. On one visit, the children played in a room with just four toys; on the other, they had access to 16 toys.

The team charted how many times the toddler picked up a toy; how long they played with it; and how many ways they played with it.

"When there were fewer toys, they played with them in more ways," Metz said.

In the 16-toy environment, many of the children played with 10 or more toys in the 15 minutes soon after they entered the room. By flitting from toy to toy, they didn't take the time to explore the ways they could use each toy, Metz said.

Fewer toys led to "higher quality play," meaning the toddler stuck with the toy for longer and played with it in more creative ways. Instead of stacking or tipping a toy, they began to hammer with it or feed it or hide it. This increased exploration may support development of motor and cognitive skills.

"Today there is the demand to have the latest and greatest toy that encourages a more technological mind. In this study, we used older toys that encouraged more creative play and tested the theory of is less really more?" said Dr. Carly Dauch, who graduated from UT in May following the completion of the study and is now an occupational therapist at the Wood County Board of Developmental Disabilities. "How the children played supported our hypothesis and provides support for deeper and richer play with fewer toys."

Michelle Imwalle and Brooke Ocasio, who also graduated in May, were the other graduate students involved in the project.

The bottom line for parents: "If your child receives an abundance of toys, you don't need to introduce them all at once," Metz said. "Save some for later and swap them out. If they have a chance to explore a few toys at a time, they might have a richer experience."

This is also good news for families who may feel guilty for not being able to shower their children with dozens of toys.

"They're not depriving their children of an opportunity for meaningful play," Metz said. "This is a less is more story."

that responsibility uncovering many misdeeds through investigative reporting that resulted in positive change," UT President Sharon L. Gaber said. "I look forward to him sharing with our graduates how he got his start here in Toledo and inspiring them to stay curious and serve their communities."

Born in Toledo, Sallah is a 1977 alumnus of The University of Toledo, graduating cum laude with a bachelor of arts degree in journalism. He was named UT's Outstanding Alumnus in the Social Sciences in 2004. Sallah also is a 1973 graduate of St. John's Jesuit High School.

He was a reporter and national affairs writer at The Blade for more than a decade, and was the lead reporter on the 2003 project "Buried Secrets, Brutal Truths" that exposed the U.S. Army's longest war crimes case of the Vietnam War. The series won numerous national awards, including the 2004 Pulitzer Prize for Investigative Reporting.

While investigations editor and reporter at the Miami Herald, Sallah led an inquiry into local corruption. His team's 2006 "House of Lies" series exposed widespread fraud in Miami-Dade County public housing and earned the 2007 Pulitzer Prize for Local Reporting. He was named a 2012 Pulitzer Prize finalist for his series "Neglected to Death," which uncovered deadly conditions in Florida assisted-living facilities, led to the closing of 13 facilities, and was the impetus for a gubernatorial task force to overhaul state law.

During his two years at The Washington Post, Sallah received a Robert F. Kennedy Award for Excellence in Journalism for an investigation that exposed a predatory system of tax collection in the District of Columbia.

He returned to the Miami Herald in 2014 and was named a Pulitzer Prize finalist in 2016 for uncovering one of the nation's most corrupt sting operations in a police unit that laundered $71.5 million for drug cartels, kept millions for brokering the deals, and failed to make a single significant arrest.

Sallah is the author of the books "Tiger Force: A True Story of Men and War" and "Yankee Comandante: The Untold Story of Courage, Passion and One American's Fight to Liberate Cuba." He also was a consultant for the Public Broadcasting Service documentary "American Experience."

UT's fall commencement ceremony will recognize graduates from the colleges of Arts and Letters; Business and Innovation; Judith Herb College of Education; Engineering; Graduate Studies; Health and Human Services; Honors College; Natural Sciences and Mathematics; Nursing; Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences; and University College.

UT social media ranked 14th among Division I institutions

Educational, informative, fun and timely. Those are just some of the factors that have placed The University of Toledo's social media content ahead of the pack.

The University's Facebook, Twitter and Instagram accounts were compared against 338 Division I programs, and the University was ranked 14th for its robust engagement.

Rival IQ, a social media analytics company out of Seattle, compared social media engagement figures of university-level accounts from a 10-month period spanning August 2016 to May 2017.

Social media engagement is commonly defined as an interaction on a social media post that can be measured by likes, comments, favorites, retweets, shares and reactions. Once data was gathered, results were weighed based on audience size, activity and engagement.

"This is an effort on our part to inform the campus community while occasionally showing the lighter side of campus," said Cam Norton, associate director for social media. "Our small team often creates videos and other content to be used on the same day to stay relevant."

Overall, UT placed 14th out of the 338 institutions. On Twitter, UT ranked No. 8, and the University had top 50 placements in Facebook and Instagram.

UT was the only Mid-American Conference university ranked in the top 100 programs.

During the 10 months analyzed by Rival IQ, UT had several high-performing posts that aided in the ranking, according to Norton. Posts on research, graduation, sports victories and dogs generated the most engagement.

UT has more than 53,000 followers on Facebook (facebook.com/utoledo), more than 59,000 people follow @UToledo on Twitter, and there are more than 12,000 followers of the uoftoledo Instagram account.

Dec. 15 deadline to make changes to tax deferred annuities

The IRS recently announced new limits for 403b and 457 plans.

Beginning Jan. 1, the contribution limits are:

- Younger than age 50 — $18,500, and
- Older than age 50: $24,500.

Employees who would like to increase or change their contribution amounts for 403b plans must submit the salary reduction agreement stating the new per-pay contribution amount. And for Ohio Deferred Compensation 457 plans, employees must contact Ohio Deferred Compensation to change their contribution.

Employees can enroll or make changes to these plans anytime during the year.

However, these actions must be taken by Friday, Dec. 15, and submitted to the Benefits Department in Human Resources in order to start contributions the first pay in January.

"We also want to let employees know that all contributions are changing to 26 deductions — and 19 for nine-month employees — per year for 2018," Kate Johnson, manager of benefits planning and administration, said.

For more information, contact benefits@utoledo.edu or call 419.530.4747 and ask to speak with a benefits representative.

Rockets preview Dollar General Bowl in Mobile

By Paul Helgren

Toledo Head Football Coach Jason Candle, along with seniors Logan Woodside and Terry Swanson, visited Mobile, Ala., Wednesday in preparation for the 2017 Dollar General Bowl.

The Mid-American Conference Champion Rockets will face Sun Belt Co-Champion Appalachian State Saturday, Dec. 23. The 7 p.m. game will be broadcast on ESPN.

The Rockets toured Ladd-Peebles Stadium, site of the Dollar General Bowl, as well as University Military School-Wright High School, where UT will hold its practices during bowl week.

During a stop for lunch, the players met with and posed for photos with children from St. Elmo's Elementary School. Candle and the players met with local media in a late afternoon news conference before returning to Toledo.

"We're looking forward to playing a tremendous opponent in App State," Candle said. "We've had a tremendous year, winning a conference championship, and it certainly would be awesome for our seniors to finish it with a win in their final game."

Toledo will officially arrive in Mobile Tuesday, Dec. 19, in anticipation of bowl activities that will include a Mardi Gras-style parade, a visit to the USS Alabama, a bowling competition vs. Appalachian State, and a visit to the University of South Alabama Children's and Women's Hospital.

Ticket orders for the Dollar General Bowl are being taken online, by phone or in person at the UT Athletic Ticket Office in Savage Arena.

Tickets can be purchased through UT through Thursday, Dec. 21, at 5 p.m. See below for details.

Year in Review

January

- UT is nationally recognized as the first university campus in the country to simultaneously honor all service members of the armed forces and the families who lost a loved one defending the United States by dedicating both a Blue Star Memorial marker and Gold Star Memorial marker.
- UT Medical Center is named one of America's 32 best teaching hospitals at preventing central-line infections in intensive care units by Consumer Reports.
- The 800-pound, life-size interactive periodic table debuts in the main entrance of Wolfe Hall and features 118 LED-illuminated glass boxes; it is the first of its kind at a university or museum in Ohio and Michigan. "Living Science: The Ever-Changing Periodic Table" was funded by a $31,465 grant from UT's Women & Philanthropy.
- Some 1,800 attend the 16th annual Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Unity Celebration in Savage Arena. UT students volunteer throughout the city as part of the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Week of Service.
- UTMC leaders hold information sessions to discuss how the teaching hospital will continue to serve south Toledo.
- Total enrollment for spring semester is 19,221, according to official 15-day census numbers. That's up from 18,849 in spring semester 2016.
- Some 800 volunteers assemble 140,000 meals to be sent to Haiti for hurricane relief at Feed My Starving Children, a global service project organized by the Klar Leadership Academy of the College of Business and Innovation.
- Jemele Hill, award-winning national sports journalist and analyst on ESPN, shares her story with more than 700 who attend UT's 33rd Annual Conference for Aspiring Minority Youth Jan. 28 in the Thompson Student Union.

- More than 400 protesters gather in front of the Thompson Student Union Jan. 30 and march on Main Campus to protest President Donald Trump's executive order suspending the entry of individuals from certain countries into the United States for 90 days. Chants of "UT unity" echo across Centennial Mall.
- Pledges from 709 donors to the UT Community Charitable Campaign total $134,568, which will assist nearly 220 nonprofit organizations throughout the community.
- Former Toledo running back Kareem Hunt rushes for 118 yards on 15 carries and is named the North's Most Outstanding Player in the 2017 Reese's Senior Bowl.

February

- Dr. Angela Davis, an activist, scholar and author, speaks at UT's Black History Month Kickoff Luncheon Feb. 4 in a packed Thompson Student Union Auditorium.
- Dan Barbee is named chief executive officer of UT Medical Center after serving in the role on an interim basis since June 2016.
- The Journal of Great Lakes Research identifies Associate Professor of Ecology Thomas Bridgeman's "high-quality research" on harmful algal blooms as one of its five most cited papers for nearly three years.
- Alex Sheen, who started the international social movement because I said I would, talks about the power of promises kept Feb. 16 in Doermann Theater as part of the Jesup Scott Honors College Distinguished Lecture Series.

- The UT Board of Trustees votes to endorse the Multiple Campus Master Plan 2017 that establishes a guide to the evolution of the University's campuses for the next decade. The plan focuses on four themes: repositioning the academic core, investing in research, consolidating athletics, and enhancing student life.

- UT emoji debut.

March

- The women's basketball team defeats Northern Illinois, 82-71, and celebrates winning the Mid-American Conference Tournament March 11 at Quicken Loans Arena in Cleveland. The Rockets advance to the NCAA Championships for the first time since 2001.
- A total of 155 fourth-year medical students learn where they will train for their residencies at Match Day; 15 percent will stay in Toledo to continue their training.
- U.S. News & World Report ranks UT's law school No. 132 out of 196 schools as part of its 2018 Best Graduate Schools edition. That is up from No. 144 last year.
- The University and Owens Community College agree to a dual-admission partnership called Rocket Express, which is designed to provide a seamless pathway to a bachelor's degree from UT starting at Owens.
- Michael Harders, vice president of university advancement and development for Kennesaw State University in Georgia, joins UT as vice president for advancement.
- Gary Pinkel, former UT head football coach from 1991 to 2000 who had a career record of 73-37-3 and was named the 1995 MAC Coach of the Year, gives the keynote address at the KeyBank Global Leaders Forum in Savage Arena.

- The Board of Trustees votes to honor three faculty members with the most prestigious professorship title. Appointed to the rank of Distinguished University Professor are Dr. Sarit Bhaduri in the Department of Mechanical, Industrial and Manufacturing Engineering in the College of Engineering; Llewellyn Gibbons in the College of Law; and Dr. Bina Joe in the Department of Physiology and Pharmacology in the College of Medicine and Life Sciences.
- Head Football Coach Jason Candle agrees to a contract extension through the 2021 season.

Dana Obery, left, Andrea Perrin and Fouad Bouso — students in the Master of Science in Biomedical Sciences Program in the College of Medicine and Life Sciences — showed some of the stuffed animals that were collected on Health Science Campus during a weeklong toy drive. Student organizations organized the drive on Health Science Campus. All stuffed animals and monetary donations will benefit pediatric patients at the UT Medical Center Emergency Department.

Winter break to provide rest, relaxation

By Christine Wasserman

As the University announced in April, a new winter break schedule will be implemented this month, in response to feedback from employees over several years. This break will enable faculty and staff to rest and rejuvenate at a time when many departments are operationally slow — from Dec. 25, Christmas Day, through Jan. 1, New Year's Day.

“The new winter break schedule also supports the University’s long-term sustainability by reducing costs while still maintaining crucial functions, such as hospital operations at UTM, approved research activities and public safety,” said Larry Kelley, executive vice president for finance and administration. “Therefore, the new policy does not include specific UTM employees; certain required positions, which might vary depending on annual need; and police.”

In addition to existing holiday pay, UT will provide additional paid days off — either three days or four, depending on which day the holiday falls in the year — to cover the entire specified time period. This year’s winter break schedule:

- Monday, Dec. 25 — Christmas (holiday);
- Tuesday, Dec. 26 — holiday (Columbus Day);
- Wednesday, Dec. 27 — Paid day off provided for winter break;
- Thursday, Dec. 28 — Paid day off provided for winter break;
- Friday, Dec. 29 — Paid day off provided for winter break; and
- Monday, Jan. 1 — New Year’s Day (holiday).

“If you work on Main Campus or Scott Park Campus, you should not be on campus during winter break unless pre-approved by your department’s leadership in order to conduct essential business,” Kelley said. “Access to buildings will be restricted, and facility operations and ground maintenance also will be limited.”

For departments with an area (such as a lab) that must maintain normal heating and/or requires other specific maintenance during winter break, leadership should immediately contact Jason Toth, associate vice president for facilities, at jason.toth@utoledo.edu to make these arrangements.

Leadership members also are responsible for designating any specific employees who need to be on call and/or must work during winter break in order to provide essential services, such as to conduct research or provide services in the case of an emergency. Further, each department’s leadership should ensure appropriate notification of UT’s closure is provided to their customers and all affected service or product providers, such as vendors and contractors.

Additional winter break details, including frequently asked questions, are available at utoledo.edu/depts/hr/benefits/time-off/winter-break.html.

If you have any questions after reading the information on this webpage, talk with your supervisor or contact your human resources consultant.

Main Campus Medical Center treats students, employees

By Sarah A. Velliquette

The Main Campus Medical Center is open five days a week to provide health services to students and employees in a convenient location.

The on-campus medical services are primarily for sick visits; however, students who have a primary care physician out of town also can schedule appointments for primary care needs, such as physicals or oversight of chronic medical conditions.

“We understand the convenience factor when it comes to serving employees and students and having an office right on campus,” said Dr. Linda Speer, professor and chair of family medicine. “If a member of our campus community is experiencing symptoms of an ear or sinus infection, for example, you can schedule an appointment to be seen, in most cases, that same day.”

The Main Campus Medical Center is staffed with a nurse practitioner with a physician in the office on Wednesdays. Appointments are encouraged. Walk-in patients will be treated; however, they could have a considerable wait time when patient volume is high, Speer said.

In the event there are not any immediate openings at the Main Campus Medical Center, the staff will assist with making arrangements for the employee or student to be seen at another UT health-care provider at the Student Health and Wellness Center on Health Science Campus, the Regency Medical Campus off Talmadge Road north of Monroe Street, or Glendale Medical East on Glendale Avenue between Health Science Campus and Byrne Road.

The Main Campus Medical Center is closed during summer term, and fall, winter and spring breaks, a decision that was made earlier in the year in response to low usage.

Students on campus during breaks can access medical services in the Student Wellness Center located in the lower level of the Ruppert Health Center on Health Science Campus. They may use the UT transit loop that provides a free shuttle between campuses with a direct stop at Ruppert Health Center. Students can use the TransLoc service to track the UT buses en route at <https://utoledo.transloc.com>.

The last day of operation for the Main Campus Medical Center this month will be Friday, Dec. 15.

The Main Campus Medical Center will reopen Tuesday, Jan. 16, for spring semester.

The hours of operation are Monday through Thursday from noon to 6 p.m., and Friday from 1 to 5 p.m.

To schedule an appointment, call 419.530.3451. For more information about the Main Campus Medical Center, visit utoledo.edu/healthservices/student.

Professor honored for pioneering academic contributions

By Ashley Diel

Dr. David Nemeth, UT professor in the Department of Geography and Planning, has received the second annual Kevin O'Donnell Distinguished Friend of Korea Award.

Nemeth

The Friend of Korea Award is dedicated to enhancing cultural awareness and friendship between Americans and Koreans and was founded in 2002 by former Peace Corps volunteers who served in Korea between 1966 and 1981.

Nemeth spent two years on Jeju Island off the southern coast of South Korea with the Peace Corps in 1972. After returning to the United States, he pursued researching, publishing and teaching about Korea.

“I formed a mystical attachment to Jeju Island and a fictive kinship with its inhabitants during my Peace Corps years of service,” Nemeth said. “In addition, I found a moral compass there.”

“After Peace Corps, my in-depth studies of Jeju Island, highlighted by many return visits, became a rewarding intellectual obsession that I vigorously pursued while earning my PhD at UCLA.”

Friends of Korea

Dedicated to fostering cultural awareness and friendship between Americans and Koreans

Nemeth's research focuses on cultural geographic studies in Korea, which include diverse yet related explorations into Neo-Confucianism, geomancy, economic-growth ideology and agricultural ecology.

In 1987, Nemeth published a book titled “The Architecture of Ideology: Neo-Confucian Imprinting on Cheju Island, Korea,” which has since been translated into Korean.

“This award in general draws international scholarly and public attention to the profound significance of Korean civilization on the world stage, past, present and future,” Nemeth said. “More specifically, my award celebrates the uniqueness and worth of Jeju Island's remarkable landscape and culture within Korea.”

Ritter Planetarium hosting holiday shows this month

By Ashley Diel

Join in some holiday cheer at the UT Ritter Planetarium this year and check out two educational and festive shows.

“The Alien Who Stole Christmas,” recommended for children 4 to 10, will run Fridays at 7:30 p.m. through Dec. 22.

Follow along as Santa meets Mr. Feep, an alien from another world, and watch as they go on an adventure to the farthest regions of the solar system.

“Santa’s Secret Star” will run Saturdays at 1 p.m. through Dec. 23.

The program is geared toward children ages 4 to 7 and tells the story of how Santa uses the constellations to find his way around the world on Christmas.

“Santa fans of all ages should attend,” said Alex Mak, associate planetarium director. “These shows are entertaining, educational and seasonal-appropriate.”

Both programs will take place in the full-dome studio and offer an immersive, 3D experience. UT’s full-dome projector, the Spitz SciDome XD, was installed in 2011.

Admission is $7 for adults; $5 for children, UT community members and seniors; children 3 and younger are free.

For more information, call Ritter Planetarium at 419.530.2650 or its 24-hour information hotline at 419.530.4037.

STAR POWER: Santa Claus and Rudolph appear in “Santa’s Secret Star,” UT’s first full-dome production that premiered in 2014. The show is based on a planetarium program created in 1988 by Alex Mak, associate director of Ritter Planetarium.

Wanted: Works for 2018 Health Science Campus Artist Showcase

Mulford Library is seeking submissions for its 13th Annual Health Science Campus Artist Showcase.

The deadline to apply for consideration to be included in the showcase is Friday, Jan. 12.

The library is accepting submissions from UT faculty, staff and students in the health sciences — nursing, medicine, pharmacy and the health professions — as well as UT Medical Center employees.

To be considered for the show, digital images of artwork can be sent to hcartshow@utoledo.edu, along with a submission form that can be found with guidelines at <http://libguides.utoledo.edu/hcart>.

In the past, the showcase has featured artwork in a variety of media, including photography, painting, drawing, sculpture, jewelry making, quilting, multimedia, graphics, wood carving and more.

The showcase will be on display from Feb. 12 through April 2 on the fourth floor of Mulford Library.

An artist reception is planned for Friday, Feb. 16, from 4 to 6 p.m. with a lecture on “Renaissance Art as Medicine” by Allie Terry-Fritsch, associate professor of art history at Bowling Green State University.

Questions about the showcase can be directed to Jodi Jameson, assistant professor and nursing librarian at Mulford Library, who is a member of the artist showcase committee, at 419.383.5152 or jodi.jameson@utoledo.edu.

‘Star Wars’ Day set for men’s basketball game Dec. 16

By Steve Easton

“Star Wars” Day will be held Saturday, Dec. 16, at 2 p.m. when the Toledo men’s basketball team hosts Wright State in a non-conference matchup.

Fans can dress up as their favorite character from the popular film series and have their pictures taken during the first half and halftime with “Star Wars” characters Obi-Wan Kenobi, Darth Vader, Princess Leia and a Storm Trooper.

Young Rocket fans also can take part in Jedi training in the Fetterman Gym from 1:15 to 2 p.m. The cost for the Jedi training is $7 and includes a game ticket, a light saber and a Jedi training certificate. Participants must be dressed up in a “Star Wars” costume; Jedi training is based on availability due to limited space.

Jedi are members of a powerful order of scholars and fighters skilled in manipulating the universe with their minds. They are endowed with incredible physical and metaphysical strength, and their power is well-known everywhere in the galaxy. While they are tough fighters when necessary, they seek peace for the galaxy. They are always looking for ways to help those around them and keep the dark side at bay.

A costume contest also will be held during the game with the winner announced during the second half.

The Rockets also are teaming up with Leadership Toledo’s Students in Action for a toy drive. Fans are encouraged to bring a new, unwrapped toy to the game to help make the holidays brighter for kids at Toledo Children’s Hospital.

For ticket information, stop by the UT Athletic Ticket Office in the Sullivan Athletic Complex at Savage Arena, go online at utrockets.com, or call 419.530.GOLD (4653).
